Brand Collaboration & IRL

Gatherings

The problem

Get in the room

Digital channels are exhausted. LinkedIn ads are expensive.
So how do you actually get traction — and fast?

B2B deals require in-person time. The more time spent in person with the buying committee, the more obvious a business collaboration becomes — but that time is rarely natural or easy to get, especially when the relationship is lukewarm or cold.

We solve this by building a series of gatherings with other brands, so that coming into the room feels natural and obvious for your target audience.

Eleven rooms

Alexandra Studio designs and hosts in-person B2B gatherings that turn cold and lukewarm relationships into real conversations. So far: executive breakfasts, an industry panel, builder nights, partner dinners and a full build day — for Heijbel Growth, Solvapay and Cardboard, together with ecosystem partners such as Open Payments and Zwapgrid.

The formats

Six ways to get the right people into the same room.

01

Round tables

Executive breakfasts for a handful of senior peers around one sharp question.

Heijbel Growth · Cardboard

02

Builder events

Build nights and build days where developers ship real things on your product.

Solvapay · Open Payments

03

Panels

A stage for the brands you want to know — followed by dinner with the speakers.

Heijbel Growth at Vitalis

04

AWs

After-work formats: a lower threshold and a wider net, with the same curated guest list.

05

Side events

Seated dinners for partners and decision-makers, at home or abroad.

Solvapay, incl. Amsterdam

06

Alternatives

Something else entirely. The format follows the audience, not the other way round.

How it works

i.

Define the room

Who must be there for the deal to move — for example CMOs at companies of 50–300 people, or fintech builders and partners.

ii.

Borrow trust

Co-host with brands your audience already knows, so the invitation feels natural rather than like a sales pitch.

iii.

Design the format

A sharp topic, the right speakers and the right size: breakfast, build night, panel or dinner.

iv.

Follow through

Content, product feedback and warm conversations — followed up and tracked through to pipeline.

Case 01

Heijbel Growth

What we built

Three CMO breakfasts, plus an industry panel at Vitalis with Natural Cycles, Mindler and Sleep Cycle — pitched and cast by Alexandra Studio, with a dinner for the panelists afterwards.

What it opened

Repeat, peer-level access to the CMO audience. And two new prospects — Natural Cycles and Mindler — brought onto the stage as speakers.

The client

Marketing agency based on Södermalm, Stockholm.

The audience

CMOs at companies with 50–300 people.

Case 02

solvapay

The client

Seed-stage fintech start-up based in Kungsträdgården, Stockholm.

The goal

B2B traction of any kind — and distribution through partnerships.

What we built

Three builder nights, two partner dinners (one in Amsterdam) and the Embedded Finance Build Day with ecosystem partners.

Is growth a judgement call?

CEO + CFO Breakfast, led by Fairlo's Head of Finance and Gilion's CFO & Deputy CEO

Fri 4 September · Embassy House, Medborgarplatsen

Cardboard is a Norwegian company without an established Swedish network. The breakfast positioned it in Stockholm next to Gilion and Fairlo — two names with established local networks — designed to lower the trust barrier and open warm introductions.

What it achieves

- Access to buying committees
- Partner introductions
- Credible brand association
- Product feedback
- Content you can reuse
- Warmer sales conversations

Why it works

Deals are won in person.

Time with the buying committee is what makes a collaboration feel obvious.

Borrowed trust.

Co-hosting with known names lowers the barrier — Cardboard was positioned in Stockholm alongside Gilion and Fairlo.

Organic, not paid.

The Build Day reached 142 organisations with SEK 0 in ad spend.

A series, not a one-off.

Repeat breakfasts turn a first meeting into an ongoing peer relationship.

These are leading indicators. We report them separately from booked revenue.

What we measure

Attendance is where measurement starts, not where it ends. Every series is reported against one scorecard — from who actually showed up to revenue booked.

01
Verified attendance
Unique people who actually checked in — not invites, not sign-ups.

02
Target-account coverage
Share of your target companies represented in the room.

03
Buying-committee depth
Target accounts with two or more engaged stakeholders.

04
Qualified conversations
Meetings with a defined need, the right role and an agreed next step.

05
Meetings booked
Follow-ups booked within 30 days of the event.

06
Pipeline
Opportunities sourced and influenced — reported separately.

07
Stage progression
Deals advancing a stage within 30 / 60 / 90 days.

08
Revenue
Closed-won deals and booked revenue.

Leading indicators — attendance, coverage, conversations — are always reported separately from pipeline and booked revenue.

What it can look like

Three ways to start. Add a panel, an AW or a partner dinner to any of them — the format follows your audience.

The breakfast series

Three executive breakfasts for your buyer persona, each built around one sharp question and co-hosted with brands they trust.

As built for Heijbel Growth & Cardboard

The builder programme

Build nights for developers and partners in your ecosystem, with your product at the centre.

As built for Solvapay

The build day

One day, many teams, working prototypes on your APIs — and a pipeline report at the end.

As built with Open Payments

Let’s get you in the room

Tell us who you need to meet. We’ll design the room, bring the right brands to the table and make showing up the obvious choice.
